William McAlexander interview with Douglas Young	ualr-ms-0231_na_na_aud10_dm	William McAlexander interviews Dr. Douglas Young regarding the history of Arkansas Symphony Orchestra and the Symphony Board. Young discusses the composition of the Symphony Board and his personal reasons for being on the Board. The cancellation of a 1980 concert with a performer from the Soviet Union is recounted, as well as the role of the Board in approving artist selection, repertoire selection, and fundraising. Young discusses the process for selecting a conductor, particularly the process used in selecting Robert Henderson to succeed Kurt Klippstatter. Helen Buchanan's and Lily Peter's involvement with the Symphony are discussed, as are the preparations for the symphony's trip to perform at the Kennedy Center in 1976. Stephan McAteer interview with Martha Markland	ualr-ms-0231_na_na_aud05.1; ualr-ms-0231_na_na_aud05.2	Stephan McAteer interviews Martha Markland about her history as a Arkansas Symphony Orchestra Guild member, the history of the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra Guild, and the history of the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra. Discussion includes the Designer House project, the generosity of Little Rock, the social aspects of symphony-going, and how symphony musicians are paid and recruited. Comparisons and changes between symphony audiences of the past and present are made. The transition from amateur musicians to professional musicians is recounted, including the audience's point of view and thoughts on why this transition may have occurred during the Henderson era instead of under previous conductors. The influence and personalities of McBeth, Klippstatter, Henderson, and Itkin are discussed, as are the fledgling years of the symphony. Stories told include those regarding Stella Boyle Smith, Lily Peter, Elizabeth Young, and other women in the symphony's history.
